was being conducted, he was not actually present at the game, for he had been sleeping in bed.

Deputy Sheriff Chillingworth stated that, when arrested, the man had not even known where his hat was and did not know anything about the location of the various articles in the room so could scarcely have been at his place of domicile.

"About four or five months ago," remarked Judge Wilcox "a Chinese who was accused of gambling said that he had been asleep at the time of the arrest. The court gave him the advantage of the doubt. Since that time every rowd of gamblers has had some one in it, who has claimed that he was asleep That defence has been worn out and it does not go any longer.
